PRESENTER'S BIO

I was born and raised in Hingham, MA. I have been interested in weather and earth science since I was little. My first weather experience was probably Hurricane Gloria in 1985 when I remember my parents said we had to stay inside. I vividly remember Hurricane Bob as well in 1991. My mother bought me my first weather video in 1992 from TheWeather Channel called El Nino – Drought to Deluge, and I have been hooked ever since. I remember being with my father back in 1995 surveying the damage from the F4 Great Barrington, MA tornado.

Starting in 1997, I began videotaping and photographing lightning. I have never seen a tornado in real life but have come close several times in Kansas and Missouri as well as in 1996 in the northeast near Housatonic as the siren went off while with my father was on the way to Lenox. My career as a tractor trailer driver gives me even more opportunity to videotape and photograph severe weather. Currently, I reside in Chicopee with my girlfriend and her two young children.
